

BRIGHT WHITE LIGHT GLOBAL, INC LIABILITY DISCLAIMER

TERMS OF SERVICE

This Website www.bwl.media is maintained and operated by Bright White Light Global, Inc ("BWL"). BWL business includes providing consulting services to clients on strategic business matters. BWL is not a registered broker/dealer or an Investment Advisor. BWL does not offer or participate in offers of securities for sale or provide investment advice to others. Nothing on this Website is intended to constitute (i) an offer to sell or buy, or a solicitation of an offer to sell or buy securities from BWL; (ii) investment advice or an offer to provide such advice; or (iii) a basis for making any investment decision.

BWL provides a wide range of services to media and entertainment companies, production entities, investment banks, private equity funds, venture capital investors and other clients based on the following terms:

Advice to Media and Entertainment companies, Private Equity, Venture Capital and Strategic Investors - BWL provides consulting services to clients on either a retainer or project basis. These include identifying potential investment opportunities, evaluation of transactions being contemplated by clients, development of strategic plans for companies and evaluation of media project market commercialization strategies and opportunities. These services are provided by contract directly to clients and do not place BWL in the role of a Broker/Dealer.

Financial Transaction Advice – BWL is not a registered Broker/Dealer and does not act as an agent for buyers or sellers of businesses. This is consistent with the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 which directs that brokers and dealers in securities register with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") and become members of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ("FINRA"). The SEC considers the term "broker" to generally include persons providing advice regarding financial transactions who accept "transaction-based" compensation. Transaction-based compensation is defined as any commission or finder's fee which is dependent or based upon the execution of a transaction. More broadly, advisers on buying or selling companies are subject to SEC regulation because transaction advice generally involves the transfer of securities – typically, equity interests in the company being bought or sold.

Securities Services Provided by an Investment Bank – If potential clients require assistance in executing a transaction involving the purchase or sale of securities, as opposed to the sale of assets or negotiation of licensing arrangements, BWL typically introduces them to an investment bank. Clients enter into a contract with such investment bank to receive the requested services. BWL cannot receive transaction-based fees.

Conflicts of Interest – Despite the fact that most BWL clients operate in one or more parts of the media and entertainment industry, conflict of interest issues between BWL clients have been very rare. In part, this is because BWL works with clients who have different investment objectives or have different roles in the media and entertainment industry. The following principles have proven over time to minimize conflict concerns on behalf of clients:

- Transactions Between Clients – In situations where one BWL client is acting as a broker and another as either a buyer or seller, BWL makes clear at the very beginning which side it will work on. Confidential information which becomes known to BWL is not provided to the counter party.
- Cross Consulting – In situations where BWL introduces a service provider to a retainer client – an advertising agency, for example – BWL does not accept referral fees from the service provider. Said another way, BWL typically receives fees from one party or the other in a client situation, but not both.
- Idea Introductions – Proprietary ideas developed by BWL are presented to only one client at a time; the one judged most appropriate for the size and shape of investment based on their expressed interests. Only if they are formally declined are they considered for other clients.

Non-Disclosure Agreements with Others – BWL is sometimes made a party to non-disclosure agreements signed by retained clients. BWL works to adhere to the terms of these agreements, including the return of confidential material when it is requested. For this reason, BWL is sometimes unable to work on a specific M&A or consulting assignment.
